DEATH OF MR. CHARLES E. HAFF.

His Brother a Corpse at the Time.

The not unexpected news of the death of Mr. Chas. E. Haff reached this city Thursday morning and was received with regret by all who knew him. It was hoped at the time he left home several weeks ago to visit his parents in Clinton county, New York, that the change would be beneficial to him, as he returned from a trip there last year much improved, but the disease, of which he had been a victim for two years, had too strong a hold upon his constitution, and he grew gradually worse until it was evident that the end was approaching and his wife was telegraphed for. He passed away Wednesday afternoon in the 51st year of his age.

His eldest brother, LeRoy, who had been in bad health all summer, died Tuesday night, and this last blow has bowed the aged parent under a double weight of grief. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon and the two brothers were buried side by side.

Mr. Haff was born and raised near Peru, New York, but came to this city in 1869 and became a clerk in the grocery of Mr. John E. Day, remaining until 1871, when he returned to New York. In the summer 1872, upon the death of Mr. Walter Day, he returned here and took charge of the business of his former employer and in a short time was made a partner—the firm becoming Day & Haff, and has so remained ever since. The business prospered and in addition to their grocery here they purchased several distilleries in Anderson county, which proved paying investments, as the brands of whisky manufactured by them soon became popular, and they have never found any trouble in disposing of their goods at fair prices.

Mr. Haff was an upright, honorable gentleman, correct in all his dealings of a quiet, unassuming disposition, and a good citizen whose loss we deeply deplore.

In 1876 he married Miss Mary R. G. McIntire, of this city, who survives him, and her lot in life is now an exceedingly sad one, as she is utterly alone in the world. They had no children and all her near relatives are dead. But she has many warm friends here who deeply sympathize with her in her dire distress.

Circuit Court.

Saturday morning was devoted to civil business and quite a number of cases were disposed of, among them being many suits for divorce. In regard to these cases Judge Cantrill said:

"The docket of this court has about twenty-five cases for divorce, and from the flimsy pretexts that many of the complainants set up it would seem they supposed the Judge, without law or respect for the sacred tie of matrimony, would have no hesitation whatever to annul the bond which the church holds, that God hath put together no man must put asunder.

"I propose to be governed by the law, but complainants in such causes will find my court a rough and hard road to travel.

"I will not allow amended petitions or uncorroborated testimony of a son against a step-mother or other close relative who might have a personal end to gain in the divorce."

Holding up one case, he continued: "Here is a couple who have lived together for fifty years and now at the close of life ask for a divorce. There is nothing in the petition to warrant such a decree and I therefore dismiss the case. Here is an old man who married a very young girl and says that she left him. The man's son testifies to this, but that is not sufficient. People who contract such alliances must know what they are doing and not expect relief from this court for the mere asking of it. The case is dismissed.

Here is another case of a young couple who claim that they love each other, but in support of his petition he alleges that she has been unfaithful to him when from the evidence adduced it is nothing more than a fit of jealousy on his part and a young and pretty woman's vanity for admiration on her part."

At this the wife, who was in the court-room, burst into tears and the Judge dismissed the petition and told the husband to go back to the woman who had not ceased to love him. The couple left the court room together.

Of the twelve petitions considered only two were granted and one was submitted for trial. The rest were dismissed.

Monday morning the suit of Joseph Downing vs. S. T. Pence was taken up, and after some time consumed in selecting a jury the trial was begun about noon and was not concluded until Wednesday evening, when the jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

The plaintiff was employed at the mill of Pence in Bellepoint last year, and was engaged in brazing a saw at a forge near a tool-house in which an open keg of powder had been placed. A spark from the forge fired the powder and the explosion which followed wrecked the building and put out both of Downing's eyes, for which he brought suit against Pence laying this damages at $20,000.

Thursday morning the juries were dismissed until Monday and chancery cases have since been considered.

Illinois. Kentucky.

From Danville, Ill. Mrs. H. J. Nabor writes: "I have been using your remedies for scrofula and am greatly benefited. My back was almost one solid sore. Two boxes of Dr. Hale's Household Ointment healed it entirely."

From Olive Hill, Ky. Mrs. M. J. Matney writes, May 13, 1892: My daughter has been afflicted with erysipelas in her eyes from infancy. She is now past 12 years old and one 25c. box has cured her." It costs no more to get the best. Get a box at P. H. CARPENTER'S drug store.

Complimented the Management.

Messrs. Ringling Bros. complimented the managers of the K. M. Railway very highly for the manner in which they handled their business. They said that although they had been on the road many years they had never found a road which would handle their trains so promptly and give them so little trouble before. General Superintendent George B. Harper was up all night Tuesday and Wednesday nights and gave his personal supervision to the moving of the trains, consequently not a hitch occurred either in getting the company, with its immense amount of stock, baggage and appurtenances, into town or out again.
